

---

Subject: Buddhism and Modern Psychology is back online!

---

From: Buddhism and Modern Psychology Course Team (noreply@coursera.org)

---

To: taxspam33@yahoo.com;

---

Date: Monday, September 14, 2015 2:47 PM

---

Mari Fix,

The latest information from Buddhism and Modern Psychology on Coursera.

Dear Mari Fix,

Hi—

It's been more than a year since the Coursera course on Buddhism and Modern Psychology that you were enrolled in wrapped up—which explains why it's been more than a year since you've gotten an email from me.

I'm writing now to say that I've just re-launched the course in what Coursera calls “on demand” mode, meaning that this time around all the lectures are available from the start, so students can move through them at whatever speed they prefer. (Students can even “binge watch” them, though I fear that few people will find them quite that irresistible... ☺ )

Of course—and this pertains especially to students like you, who have already experienced the material once—students don't have to proceed through the lectures in linear fashion; you can pick and choose. If you've missed my dogs Frazier and Milo, for example, you can even go straight to the videos featuring them, because the Office Hours videos remain on the site along with the lecture videos. For that matter, if you enjoyed participating in the discussion forum the first time around, you can skip the videos altogether and go straight to the forum.

Here's where you'll find the course: www.coursera.org/learn/science-of-meditation. I hope you find some value in the material the second time around, and that you'll feel free to bring it to the attention of any friends who might benefit from it.

Best,

Robert Wright

Visiting Professor of Science and Religion

Union Theological Seminary, New York, NY

Author of The Moral Animal; Nonzero; The Evolution of God

fac tw bl bl

Unsubscribe • Visit support • Please do not reply directly to this email

Copyright (c) 2015 Coursera, Inc | 381 E. Evelyn Avenue, Mountain View, CA 94041 USA